Police Chief At ANB-ANS Meeting

Alaska Native Brotherhood and Starboard held a joint meeting recently which featured Police Chief Art Larsson.

Larsson made presentation and answered questions. He gave his views on many issues locally and what his plans for the department are.

In other matters, Representative Gabe George and Bob Shorter of the State Fish and Game Subdivision Division, explained to members about the survey they are conducting on the issue. Many members had comments to share.

Nominations for delegates to the ANB-ANS Convention, in Kake were taken. Those nominated for ANB were Gerald Thomas Jr., Fred Hope, and Charlie Carlson. Nominated for ANS were Virginia Thomas, Jan Garcia, Grace Larson, Irene Paul, Irene Roberts, Henrietta Jamera and Rena Islay.

Nominations will continue at the next meeting and elections will be then, also.

Florence Eddy and Frank O. Williams Jr. are automatically delegates as they are ANB and ANS presidents, respectively.

However, since Williams is also Executive Committee member and vice president of the local ANB will attend in his place.

Also, Pat Paul and Nelson Frank will attend as executive committee members. John Lewis will attend as ANS first vice president of the Grand Council. Bailey will attend as grand treasurer.

Board Seeks Fund Director

ANCHORAGE (AP) — The state Permanent Fund board of trustees has voted to advertise for candidates to fill the newly created $70,000-a-year position of executive director for the board.

At present, the $3.5 billion account is administered by state Department of Revenue Treasury Division employees, but the six trustees are setting up a 10-member staff for the fund. The executive director would be charged with directing the staff, managing the fund's interest-bearing investments, and carrying out the directives of the trustees.

Established by state voters in 1976, the permanent fund subjects 10 percent of the revenue from oil production on state lands. The fund's income currently is about $28.3 million per month.

An audit presented at the annual meeting of the board to Anchorage on Friday showed the fund also received $36.1 million from state mineral revenues, and $149.5 million in returns on investments during fiscal 1982.

The fund grew by about $1.4 billion last year.

The trustees, appointed by the governor, also elected economist George Rogers of Juneau to the post of chairman, replacing Anchorage banker Elmer Harrison, whose term expired July 1.

Boat Deaths

Seattle last Thursday to study the boat's owner and skipper, Mark Condit; his pregnant wife Irene, also 28; their daughter Kimberly, 5; and Mark's cousin, Michael Stewart, 19, of Bellingham.

Troopers also conducted extensive interviews in Illaie and Bellingham Friday and Saturday, the sources said.

In dismissing the possibility any victims were alive when the boat was set afire, sources said it was nearly impossible to lock anyone inside any part of the boat. Anyone left behind could have escaped after the killer crew started the fire and left the boat.

"They had to be dead beforehand," one source said.

The bodies of four of the dead have been identified as those of the boat's owner and skipper, Mark Condit; his pregnant wife Irene, also 28; their daughter Kimberly, 5; and Mark's cousin, Michael Stewart, 19, of Bellingham.

Authorities presume that the Condit family was on the boat when it was set afire, sources said.

Authorities have not identified the remains of what they believe to be two other adults, who are thought to be members of the crew.

The likelihood of identifying either set of remains is now considered remote.

Investigators have spent dozens of hours sifting through the boat in darkness without the aid of night vision goggles, but they say they have found no evidence to account for the eight persons, a missing crew member.

The three crewmen believed to have been aboard the boat were Jerome Kwon and Dean Moon, both 19, of Illaie, and Chris Heyman, 19, of San Rafael, Calif.

For the killer to flee the boat, the investigator's files left behind on the Decade's deck, the vessel drifted away before heading out from Crad; the members of the crew of the Decade, to which the investigator's mysterious was tied, or other boats at or near the dock, the sources said.

But he also couldn't take off in the boat in darkness without the risk of attracting attention from the Decade's "believe it or not" crew, which was waiting for daylight before getting the inventor under way," the sources said.

Just before dawn the boat was hoisted from the Decade, with the inventor's files left behind on the Decade's deck. The vessel drifted away before heading out from Crad; the members of the crew of the Decade, to which the investigator's mysterious was tied, or other boats at or near the dock, the sources said.
